The effect of torbactin, a synthetic antigen composed of quaternary ammonium salts of glycine and mannitol, on the immune response to insulin in rabbits was investigated. After the first oral feeding, one week before the primary immunization, torbactin was highly effective in increasing and in maintaining the serum insulin level following the insulin challenge. By contrast, no response to the insulin challenge was observed in control rabbits immunized with insulin alone. Furthermore, torbactin pretreatment prevented the development of a weak anti-insulin immune response seen in controls, and led to a significant increase in the insulin-binding antibody titer in rabbits immunized with insulin and torbactin. Torbactin may represent a new therapeutic approach for the treatment of type II diabetes.Q: Change the border-bottom-color of a message while hovering over it I have a unordered list with a list of messages. When I hover on a message, the border color of the message changes. However, the border bottom does not change along with it. Instead, the border of the first list item of the list becomes the background color of the message element. Please help. A: The border bottom doesn't change, but the border top changes, because your top border is actually outside the box. If you had just the first item selected, the color of the background is the same as the border-top-color of the element. If you want the border-bottom-color to change, then the simplest way would be to have just an absolutely positioned bottom border, using the same color as the border-top-color. The 59th X Japan tour, the band's last tour before the untimely Matsumoto incident, has revealed big Japanese audience numbers. Of course, X Japan's international fanbase, as well as that of NOFX who shared the tour bill, have been long established in Japan. NOFX have also won the Tour De France Grand Tour stage event two years in a row, so have pretty much cemented themselves in Japan. But during the early 2000s, a band called L'Arc-en-Ciel made a huge impact in Japan. They had released four albums of late 90s shoegaze/garage and were huge in Japan. I saw X Japan on stage in Paris when the band made their first sortie to Europe in the late 90s. Remember, 2000 was in the 1990s. I had never seen them live and it was awesome. I was so excited and you could tell they were having a great time and well, unlike later tours it was all about the music and they were a band still in love with their music. I also thought their guitarist felt like he couldn't live without their music and were always super humble and genuine. While NOFX and L'Arc-en-Ciel were conquering Japan, X Japan were conquering Asia. For as long as I can remember, during their show on the Asian leg of this tour, they had a guy leading the crowd in "furusu no sai ga umareta / we're so happy" and they loved it. In early 2000, I was only a few weeks into learning Japanese and was watching this band singing along in English. Both my Japanese friends, who could speak English, were repeatedly laughing at me. They said my English wasn't that good, so clearly I didn't understand the lyrics. I was trying so hard to understand them but my brain was deciding that it was never going to be any good. I was starting to think I was doomed. But through a misunderstanding, I stumbled across a Japanese record store. Suddenly, I had new Japanese friends and could understand what the song meant, all to what I thought was my own personal embarrassment

ISS Tracker is a customisable widget for Yahoo! Widgets. Visual impairment in visual neglect: an actomotor deficit? Right unilateral visual neglect is associated with both hemispatial and global deficits in the motor control system. The present study tested whether neglect also has an impact on the manual control of the right hand. Right-handed adult subjects performed three tasks with their right hand: a motor task, an attentional task, and a visual perception task. The task on the affected side involved manual repositioning of a ball. The task on the right, the unaffected side, consisted of a perceptual visual discrimination task. In all tasks, the subjects had to respond to a visual cue. The results show that, just as in the case of motor performance, patients also have difficulties inhibiting the actions of the affected hand when performing an attentional task. However, this impairment is not observed when performing a perceptual task. These results support the assumption of a link between motor control and attention.Q: Removing characters from a string in JavaScript I have a string that is a response to a JSON object to an ajax call (means can change depending on the JSON response). I'm trying to remove the ampersand before the value (I'm using some old code that I changed). The call looks like: var my_var = ""%{"name":+my_value+}"; then I try to remove the characters before and after the ampersand in the function I have, which looks like: my_value = my_value.replace(/&.*?;[a-zA-Z]+./); I'm able to remove the ampersand, but not when I add the stuff in the middle. A: I'm trying to remove the ampersand before the value You could remove the " before the value and then remove the " after the value.
