

Tricks to Write an Amazing Book Review

A book review is not something that the teachers usually ask you to write, but students do get such assignments once in a while. A book review is something huge, which at first makes you feel what a pain in the neck it is. However, if you have read the book, then it is a piece of cake for you. An academic excellence feels the most uneasy when they have not read the book and the assignment is due in less than a day.

At that time, they assume that it is impossible to get it done, and it is better not to even give it a try. However, after reading this article, you will get to know various aspects and keys to writing a book review in less than four hours.

Don't get mistaken that this time guarantee is only if you have read the book. That is not the case. Even if you are hearing the book's name for the first time, these tricks will surely help you get through the book review task.

I do not use these tricks when I write my academic papers for me, but when it comes to a book that can be up to 100s of pages, I prefer using these little techniques to fulfill the criteria.

Get to know about the author of the book. It is not about knowing their personal life or origin, but getting to know about their writing style and ways to approach things. It is better if you read an interview or blog about that author and make a picture in your mind. This will help you get to know about the author's context in the whole book. Moreover, knowing about the author will help you write the review further

Then, you need to get to know about the book, its title, the year it is published, and other physical details of the book to talk about it. After the author's introduction and book details, start with the first paragraph, where you will introduce the book. Your introduction will lay the ground for what the following discussion is about. You need to incorporate a thesis statement in this paragraph too. To make a thesis statement, you need to move on with studying the book.

Now, you must be wondering if you have to read the book. But that is absolutely not the case because it will take days to read the whole book. So, start with reading the preface of the book that will tell you what the book is about. Then you should surf the internet and look for book summaries to know about the story. It is not necessary to read the whole book here because you have to write a review, not a summary. But reading the summary is required to know the plot and setting of the book

After you are done reading the summary, start with the second paragraph that will entail the plot and summary of the review. In this paragraph, you need to mention the setting of the whole book. You need to tell the main themes and a basic summary of the book. This paragraph is about the details and specifications of the book. It will talk about the book's concepts that will tell the readers whether it is worth reading or not.

After this, you need to find out the pros and cons of the book. For this purpose, use websites or scholarly resources. You can also look for reviews written by other people to get an idea about the positive and negative aspects of the book. First, you need to state the positive aspects that the book imparts to the reader. It can include the moral lessons from the book and other themes that spread positivity.

After this section, move towards the negative aspects that will talk about the bad impact that the book might have on some readers. It can be like a critique on an element that the book negates totally. This will help to find the loopholes of the book easily. So, readers can decide whether they have to read it or not.

Once you are done, you can move on to actually formulate your thesis statement since now you have all the desired information to write one. The thesis statement will be the book's name followed by its author, then a brief description of themes, followed by negative and positive aspects of the book. This statement is the crux of the whole body of the book review. A person can get to know the quality of the whole review just from these lines.

Now that you have built the whole body of your review, the next step is the last step that is the conclusion. The conclusion of a book review is important since it is based on the writer's personal opinion. It clearly states the writer's experience and states how the writer found the book helpful and what they think can be improved. Then the writer needs to conclude positively, suggesting people to give the book a read to explore more.

Thus, following these few steps can help a person write a review without reading the whole book.

Furthermore, if you are not confident about writing, you can consult the best essay writing service and ask them to assist you in writing a review. They have professionals who can help you write a book review. They are capable of writing the whole review in no time and help you out with the assignment. Nonetheless, you can also try it yourself and give it a shot using these tricks before asking someone else.
